

JAY FLYNN

Vice President of Adult
Recovery Services

JAY FLYNN is the Vice President of Adult Recovery Services at WellPower. During his 30-year tenure at WellPower, he has worked as a Residential Counselor, Residential Site Supervisor, and from there has held multiple roles including Deputy Director and Director of Adult Services.

In 2015, Jay began his role as Vice President of Adult Recovery Services, where he oversees WellPower's services provided to over 7000 adults. His responsibility spans access to services, outpatient and case management services at the Recovery Center and outpatient services at Wellshire Behavioral Services, as well as an array of residential and housing services and the Walk-in Center staffed by over 450 professionals.

Mr. Flynn has had an integral role in the development and implementation of WellPower's ten criminal justice teams and integrated co-occurring treatment services at the organization. He has had a pivotal role in working with the National Gains Center and the Sequential Intercept Model to map Denver's mental health and criminal justice system. Additionally, he has worked closely with the forensic teams at the Colorado Mental Health Institute and has been a member of the Denver Community Corrections Board and of the Governor's Council on Community Corrections.

Jay has also had an integral role in the development and implementation of integrated co-occurring substance use and mental health treatment services and the staff trainings in these areas. Related trainings that Jay has spearheaded include Hope Training, Recovery Based Treatment, Case Management Training, Integrated Dual Disorder Treatment, Dual Relationships, Safety Training, Motivational Interviewing, and Criminogenic Risk Factor Training.
